Dear Prime Minister

I am writing to you today to raise your awareness of how people feel about welcoming refugees into our country.

I believe refugees would be a large help to our country, especially during this crisis, as we need all the help we can get for places such as the NHS, the police department or the fire department.

I appreciate that it might be a difficult time to welcome people from war-torn countries, but our nation has a magnificent history of showing compassion to other people in need. Now is the time to show this compassion.

As a country we can enjoy the good moments and cope with the bad ones because we can unite and get through this virus as one.

I would really appreciate your thoughts and consideration of my points and I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely

Stanley
